Women in Apprenticeships

Pictured Montana Coe

Name: Montana Coe

Apprenticeship: Heavy Diesel Mechanic

Why were you interested in an apprenticeship?:

I always wanted to do something with my hands, as mechanics run in my family, I was interested in an apprenticeship, because of the security it offered and that I would have the training and accreditation at the end.

Have you faced any barriers in the industry?:

Nothing too major so far, my host employer Farinola Diesel Services have been great, and are fantastic to work with.

Have you faced any stigma or stereotypes?:

Not really, majority of people are very encouraging when I say what I am doing, saying good on me for doing something so different.

What support have you received?:

My family are very proud of my choices and supportive and have encouraged me to follow my own path. FDS are incredibly supportive and are great mentors and are teaching me new skills every day. Tracy from Statewide Group Training has also been a great support.

What would you tell other women who are interested in doing an apprenticeship?:

If it's what you think you want to do then don't hesitate to give it a try, for me, it's been very rewarding and I am enjoying all that I am learning.
